Home and Foreign Influences Assisted in Advancing Wheat Prices.

CORN AND PROVISIONS WERE ALSO UP

Benefit of the Recent Rains in India . One of the Strengthening Features of the Day's Market.

CHICAGO, Nov. 27.-Home and foreign influences phared equally in advancing the price of wheat today to a point 11go above the closing price of Wednesday. Wheat absorbed most of the attention, other markets being comparatively neglected. Corn advanced be, cats closed unchanged and provisions advanced from 719c changed and provisions advanced from 74c to 15c.

Two items of news in the foreign press dispatches received here yesterday caused the selling out of some long wheat at the opening. One of these had reference to the benefit to the crops in India from the benefit to the crops in India from the hreaking of the drouth and the other to a decline of Id yesterday in the price of wheat at Liverpool. The last named piece of information was probably the result of the first. May wheat here, in consequence of the two together, was offered at the start from 85c down to $25c.

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—Bradstreet's review of the stock market temorrow will say: Irregularfessional, but weakly held long stocks have been fessional, but weakly held long stocks have been dislocked and inability to produce further liquidation with increase of the short interest has made the bear leaders cautious. The room tradicisms have several times covered their short stocks and given a temporary tene of strength to the proceedings. The features of the market were supplied by the specialties but the larger operators acting on the bear side have made drives at a number of leading stocks, though their success in depressing them was small. The general impression of the street is that material railies are not pressable, and that until conscress meets and some definite idea can be formed as tion, as well as in regard to currency and tariff legislation, as well as in regard to currency and tariff legislation, no very pronounced movement in the market is likely. There is a belief that the reduction in the middle of the month was only promature in discounting the favorable effects of the election, and that a renewed improvement in stock values is to be looked for after the opening of the new year. The ease of the market has increased steadily and facilitates the carrying of stocks. Last Saturday's bank statement indicated a phenomenal outpouring of barded funits, while the treasury gold reserves are, with our any effort being made to increase them, approaching the $120,000.000 mark.

being a fioliday, few cattle were expected in and no one was disappointed with the size of the run.

What killing cattle were here add readily at prices that were in little stronger, both cows and steers being in good demand. The offerings were all taken early. A lond of fairlish streets end at $4.5 and a piece of a load at $4.5 and a piece of a load at $4.2. The fact that beer cattle have been selling at pretty strong prices here in comparison with other markets was demonstrated on Wednesday, when a load of cattle that coat $1 on this market on Monday sold in Chicago at $2.9.

There was no great amount of activity developed in the feecer market. As it usually happens at the time of a holling there was very little country demand and regular operators were not very active buyers. In the end everything changed hands, Representative saies:

HYPNOTIZED APPETITES.

A Story Which Shows How Occultism is Hitched to Industrial Art. "Our of the oddest things I ever saw," remarked a physician to the Washington Star man, "I saw in a kind of a botel, or rather feedery, at the Chicago stock yards." "Men or cattle?" queried a listener. "Men; and good men. I wasn't bearding there, but I knew the proprietor of the place and had been his physician before he went to Chicago, and after he got there he made money enough to pay me to come and he told me to watch him, and he would tell me about him as soon as he had time. I tollowed his advice, and saw that the waiter would apparently spot a man as he came in, and when he reached a chair he would be there with a bow and a smile would be there with a bow and a smile would be there with a how and a smile ready to walt on him. The man would seem to start, as if recognizing him, and would sit down and begin to look nervous. "The waiter, in the meanthme, kept him eye on him, and would take his order. Often the order was extremely light, covering only a cup of ten or a piece of meat and brend, or possibly a glass of milk, or a bowl of bread and milk. The waiter would sauth a unit seem to insist on the great sowl of recast and mine. The watter would small seem to insist on the guest taking more, but the guest shock his head and soon finished his fregal repast. As a physician, I wendered how men who ed as these did could get along with

That afternoon the proprietor smiled That affection the proprietor smilled when I asked him about the peculiar waiter. He's a jewel," he said, and he's worth more to me than any waiter I've got, though I'm slways a little afraid of him, and to keep him in good humor I pay him about 50 per cent more than I do any of the others. I don't know what he does, and I never speak of it to anyboly, and enly to you because you are my family physician, but he has a way of picking out the people he wants to wait on as they come in, and when he gets hold of them not apparently not sick when he sits down to the table, and after a bite or two he pays to bill and goes out. That doesn't happen iten, though. His way is to make his peode cat just a little of the cheapest things—ites a 35-cent dinner, you know—and many lines a glass of milk and bread or a piece of ple will be all they want, and they will so out perfectly satisfied to pay 25 cents for the little and the care to ask about the least to their appetite, and I don't. I cave may walter to do that, and the eave my waiter to do that, and the convictor smiled innocently rather than in

'd didn't want to spoll a good thing, but thought I ought to," continued the physician, "and I proceeded to tell my friend but the water was a Svengali-by the way. e had never heard of such a person—and as defrauding the patrons of the resemment s hypnotizing them and sending them out by hypnotizing them and sending them out hilled only with suggestions, and that while it might be extremely remainerative. It was not right at all, and the waiter should be sent away. Then thinking my advice would be followed, of course, I took my departure. Six months later I came back and the first man I saw in the dining room was Svenenit, I fancy," and the physician sighed, "the Cileago climate or something must have man an effect on my friend's moral scorbid. man an effect on my friend's moral sensibil-

SHE STARTLED HIM.

But it Was Only by the Exercise of Good Generalship in the Case. There was a look about the woman's eye, relates the Washington Star, which indicated that she had asked her husband for the last time to do what she wanted. It was not an angry look; it was merely an expression which showed that ordinary means had felled and she must try finesse. Her husband, who was aftting on the step, looked over the top of his paper as she passed him to go to the front gate.
"I'm going after that loaf, of bread you spoke of in a few minutes now," he said "I'm not going to make any more re-quests," she answered, But ne did not hear her. His face was again buried in his newspaper. Presently she came rushing up the walk paper, saying:

"Here's that bread. As long as I was so much the growty I thought I would get it and the crowd? she laquired manuscrity. Of course, I am ... Why, that all happened day before yes-breast, dear."
